As a physical therapist I was looking to utilize some stall bars in our new facility. I found several online that I liked but most were metal and took up more space than I wanted. Then I found the BenchK stall bars and their attachments. Not only did they take up less space but their combination of the metal frame and wood slats was the perfect blend of form and function. They blend in nicely with our facility and function great. The stall bars were packaged well and very easy to assemble. We installed them in several places and have started to use them extensively with all of our therapy patients. The stall bars have great functionality. We use them for stretching, as a stable anchor for patients to perform balance drills, attachment points for resistance bands and more aggressive exercises. We are very happy with the product and can't recommend them enough.
